5 MARKETING LANCASHIRE

Rachel McQueen of Marketing Lancashire gave a presentation to the board on a five year vision for the effective promotion of the region. It focussed on disconnecting Lancashire the county from Lancashire the County Council and celebrating the region's diversity to maximise the value of having a wide range of assets with no single urban centre dominating the area. Her presentation focussed on two core questions: "who are we?" and "who do we want to be?" She talked about the 'We are Lancashire' promotional film and how it related to the regional identity and the need to promote the county for the benefit of the people who live here. She explained that Marketing Lancashire's mission was to work collaboratively with partners to identify, articulate and promote the strengths of Lancashire and focus on delivering economic benefit to the region.

Areas covered included

- re-establishing a direct connection between the places and assets and the county

Blackpool Council

itself, without extra layers or definitions (saying for example Blackpool, Lancashire rather than Blackpool, Fylde Coast),

- developing a succinct and memorable message for Lancashire,
- engaging communications professionals to reverse the obsolete and negative perception of Lancashire perpetuated in the media,
- an ambassador programme with globally-recognised personalities such as cricketer Andrew Flintoff acting as ambassadors for the county,
- the potential effect of Brexit and the need to raise the county's profile in Europe and beyond,
- tourism zones and tourism levies,
- reclaiming Lancashire's connection to the stories of its heritage,
- prioritising messages and targeting specific audiences,
- promoting Lancashire against competition from destinations with much bigger advertising budgets.

The board discussed the information presented and agreed that by broadly encouraging and adopting a culture of mutual support focussed around a recognised single brand symbol such as the Red Rose, targeted marketing and advertising of the county's strengths could challenge stereotypical perceptions of Lancashire promoted by the national media and create a credible narrative of the region's successes without any need for spin. It was suggested that locally this might include advertising to build upon and take direct advantage of existing media strengths such as BBC's Strictly Come Dancing at Blackpool's Tower Ballroom and Open Golf Championships hosted by the Royal Lytham and St Annes Golf Club.

The visual presentation is appended to these minutes.
